Notes from the Editor and Fan Consultants:

As Morioka-sensei has stated no rules for upper or lower case Barohn, please note that all Abh words in Romanized form are capitalized.

All silent letters are removed. In most cases, vowels are pronounced as they would be in Italian.

Changes to the endings of certain nouns (pertaining to direction, possession, etc.) are due to the Baronh noun declension system. Example: The nominative Lodairl becomes Lodair when used in the possessive.

The letter C always makes a hard consonant sound, so C becomes K in this text.

There is no J in authentic Baronh, but for phonetic purposes, an Ĩ becomes J, and the soft 'ge' sound (like in 'page') is spelled 'jhe' (as in 'Ruejhe').

Unlike Japanese, Baronh has a clear distinction between the letters R and L. A semi-rolled R is spelled "rl" here.

There is no W in authentic Baronh, but for phonetic purposes, and Ü ecomes W.

The letter Y is never used as a vowel or given its own individual syllabic emphasis.

In written Barohn, there's a distinction between a voiced "th" and an unvoiced "th." For the sake of simplicity, we did not make the distinction in written Baronh here.

For more information, do a web search for "Barohn" and visit fan sites like the following: For pronunciation rules: http://www.geocities.com/gatewaytoseikai/I_en.html For characters' names, military ranks, culture, history, etc.: <http://www.geocities.com/Tokyo/Shrine/4777/Seikai/seikai.html> A Baronh-Japanese Only Dictionary: <http://dadh-baronr.s5.xrea.com/doc/baronhdic-l.html#A> For a comprehensive overview of the Seikai universe: <http://www.abhnation.com/>

If you read Japanese, try the two Reader Guides entitled Seikai no Monshou

Dokuhon (1999) and Seikai no Senki Dokuhon (2001).
